Pawpaw Tree Blossom by Helen Mogill

I have walked in the woods of the Nature Area hundreds of times over the years and have loved the Pawpaw trees with their huge leaves and large pear like fruit. But I had never noticed their pretty little flower until this year when a friend pointed out the maroon blossoms on several small trees near the entrance to the creek trail.

The Pawpaw prefers moist, fertile soil and commonly grows in stream valleys. It is very tolerant of shade and typically is found beneath larger trees in a forest. Pawpaw fruits are a favorite food of opossums, raccoons, foxes, mice, and people.
