Summer Watering

During these summer months for any long term watering, please try to adhere to watering on odd/even days based on your street number. Best to water only in the early morning or late evening. Leaving a hose on all day is a waste of water and puts excess strain on the well pump. Thank you!

Garden Tips

by Helen Leake

We are seeing a lot of the plants at the garden centers in biodegradable containers. The pot will break down in time, but it must be kept very wet at all times. Usually, when you purchase the plants, the container is very wet, and sometimes the roots are growing thru the container. This is good, because the container will act as compost, but you must keep it moist at all times.

Break the container, or cut down on the sides before you plant it so the roots can grow out into the ground, because it will take some time for it to decompose. It is very important that all of the container is covered with soil. If the top of the container dries out it will pull moisture from the lower part, which can also pull moisture from the soil and plant roots. The plant could die. You can also pull off some of the top of it before you plant it.

Now is the time to cut back the common lilac and the spirea. You can remove 1/3 of the bush to try to keep it smaller. You can remove 1/3 of the older center stems to help control the size. That will open up the center for more new growth making it a more fuller shrub.

In June the apple, peach, and plum trees start dropping some green fruit for various reasons. It is also time for us to start thinning the fruit. If we leave too much fruit, it could be small. If we thin it we will have larger, juicy fruit. Also the tree is more likely to be able to produce fruit every year.

You want to have about 6-8 inches between fruit. If it is a short branch and they are closer, you could leave them. As the fruit gets bigger, it also gets heavier. Once the branches start to bend down, it is time for a prop. Place a sturdy board out about 2/3 of the way out from the trunk. Be sure to check it after a windy day, some times it will fall over.

Last year, the mosquitoes were spreading some bad diseases, so places had to spray to kill them. Unfortunately, they also killed the good bugs that might of helped kill the mosquitoes. This year they are reporting a lot of ticks. When you go into the woods or places that harbor a lot of mosquitoes and tick, be sure to wear long sleeves, and long pants and a hat. Also wear some insect repellent. There are a lot of things to repel mosquitoes, but we don't see a lot about ticks. One that is advertised to repel deer ticks is Lemon Eucalyptus. It is a lotion and comes in a tube. As always follow the directions on the container.

In the hot summer, we worry about our plants, Dr. Ed Brotah, a retired meteorologist, says we need to also protect ourselves. We like being out in the sun, which is good and bad for us. Like everything else, we need to use moderation. Sunlight contains potentially harmful ultraviolet rays, {UVA} VA rays can cause sunburn, a redness or blisterings of the skin. It can also harm your eyes. Long term exposure can cause skin to age and wrinkle, most important, risk of skin cancer. You can get UV rays even on days of light cloud cover. To warn the risk of UV rays, the National Weather Service {NWS} issues a UV Index forecast. The index runs from 0-16, values of 6 or higher brings a higher risk. We need some sun shine, but try to avoid it from 10AM-4PM, when it is the highest. Use sun screen with SPF of 30 or higher. You can also wear sun-protective clothing and a wide brimmed hat.

Your body cools itself by sweating and having water evaporate off your body. When the humidity is high, that slows and lessens the evaporative cooling.

Lightning is another thing to be aware of. In 2016, 38 people were killed by lightning. The garden or any other open place is no place to be when lightning flares. If you are outside when a thunderstorm is approaching, get inside, stay inside until 30 minutes passes with out a sound of thunder. Thunder typically warns us of an approaching thunderstorm. It is true that if you see lightning and count until you hear thunder, the storm is a mile away for every 5 seconds that pass. The NWS suggests the "30-30" Rule. If you start counting when you see lightning and hear the thunder in less than 30 seconds, go inside. Then wait 30 minutes after the last thunder you hear before you go back out..

Stay away from trees. Lightning often seeks the tallest object. It is not safe close to a tree, because lightning can travel down it and into the ground where you are standing. Crouching down is safer than fully laying on the ground.

Zion Bishop Cemetery

The cemetery just south of Indian Creek is in need of additional clients. Until the 1970s this cemetery was completely overrun in weeds. It is in danger of returning to that state. Most of the descendants of the early settlers who are buried in Zion Bishop have left the area. If we want the cemetery to be maintained more donors are needed. Interest has been shown by three Indian Creek families to be buried there, but we need more. The original business model was to continually maintain the cemetery with the earnings of a generous donation made in the 1980s. In a near zero interest rate environment this model doesn't work. If you would consider this as your final resting place please let me know and I'll give you all the details. Ron Parsons 309-728-2768
